Forecast For West Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Friday 19 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
A murky start to Friday, skies clearing somewhat later on.

Today:
A cloudy day, with patchy drizzle or light rain. Skies clearing slightly for the southeast through the afternoon, bringing the odd brighter spell. Feeling colder than of late. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Cloud returns to all areas through the evening and persists overnight. A few clear intervals possible during in the early hours. Some drizzle in places and light winds. Mostly frost-free. Minimum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Saturday:
A mostly dry and cloudy day. Any bright spells confined mostly to the northeast in the afternoon. Still a slight chance of drizzle. Turning breezy overnight. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Staying mostly cloudy through this period, with the risk of the odd shower or spell of drizzle, though this reducing into Monday. Brighter spells on Tuesday. Feeling mild.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.